Newfoundland & Labrador

People travel to Newfoundland and Labrador to lose themselves, and find themselves, again. Your cares melt away while watching a magnificent 10,000 year old towering iceberg cascade into a million pieces with a mighty roar.

The little things that distract you are replaced by 30-ton whales leaping out of the water or coming close to your tour boat to investigate the strange creatures – humans – entering their world.

Forget the crowded city: take a walk along the coast and the fresh sea air will do more than clear your lungs. It will unfog your mind while you watch seabirds floating on thermals while looking for lunch. And all around you the power of nature is always surprising you in new ways, from the dainty and fragile yet unbelievably tough wildflowers to a 2,000-foot waterfall spilling into a glacier-carved fjord.

Take this opportunity to explore this mysterious land. Let go of your expectations. Prepare yourself to be lost, and found, in Newfoundland and Labrador.
